Local and General

T. J. Elliott spent the week end at Banff.

The Baseball boys go to Didsbury next Tuesday for their first league game. Good luck to them.

Geo. Becker was a Calgary visitor on Wednesday.

Henry Ontkes who spent the last week visiting in Crossfield returned to his home in Drummheller on Wednesday.

If you require to renew your old Loan or take out a new one call and see me, as I can save you money. I represent the N. of Scotland Can. Mortgage Co., The Canada Life, and others.

Miss Oulley who has been teaching in the Crossfield School has resigned and left to fill her old position at Reilly, Alta. Miss Beveridge, of Calgary, is now the Primary teacher.

Take a nice refreshing bath at Barlow's Barber Shop, 35 cents.

A party of homesteaders were in town on Monday last buying horses for the Peace River country. Our town is getting a name as a market for good horse flesh.

Mr. S. H. Bray and Dr. Taugher, the members of the Board of Trade who have charge of the advertising for the "Made in Canada Train" visit to Crossfield are getting busy. Let us hope there will be a good turn out to see this train as it is well worth the time spent.

Mrs. S. H. Bray who has been quite ill with muscular rheumatism is on the road to recovery. Mr. Bray was also confined to the house for a few days.

HAIL INSURANCE.
Reasonable Rates.

Crossfield Fair Notes.
The prize lists have been distributed and if you did not receive a copy kindly call at the Secretary's office and he will be pleased to hand you one.

At the last meeting of the Directorate the Secretary notified the Board that the Government grant amounting to $684.17 had been received. This is a tidy sum but there is no reason why it should be less than a $1000.00. Your one dollar membership increases the grant a dollar. Let us have it.

The Directors also came to the decision that in so far as possible the grounds would be properly policed so that the Society would be in a position to safeguard their patrons. From present indications we are going to have the largest turnout of harness horses and runners that Crossfield has ever seen.

Cattle and swine are two very important branches of the Live Stock classes. Let us have your entries for these. It may be considerable trouble for you to show these but the advertising that this will give you will more than pay for the inconvenience.

ABERNETHY.
Quite an excitement was caused here a week ago on Sunday when most of the men of this district chased those horse men into Calgary. What was the matter with the phones and the R.N.W.M.P. that day?

Two more boys who will help out Leavie's Dredging have arrived in this district this spring and more expected shortly.

Ernie Archibald has been up to Exshaw with some horses from the A-C Ranch.

Mr. and Mrs. McDowell are back again from Calgary on the farm.

Mrs. Harrington and Miss Kidd spent the week end in town.

Mrs. Robertson has been up to Red Deer with her boy and girl whom she left at St. Joseph's Boarding School there.

What was the matter with those wedding bells we have been anxiously waiting to hear since Easter. I suppose they are waiting for their ship to arrive; but no avail.

A DIPLOMATIC EPISODE

It Occurred In Connection
With The War Between The States
By HUDSON E. EASTON

Everybody who knows anything of the diplomatic history attending our internal war knows that Napoleon III. endeavored to induce England to join him in interesting and putting an end to the struggle by a division of the states. It is equally well known that the czar of Russia, not content with neutrality, said to the ambassador of France, "Tell your master that if he interferes in the American civil war I will strike him." At the same time he showed his readiness to stand by the federal government by sending a fleet to New York.

This is history, or rather a synopsis of the diplomatic history of that time. But in diplomacy, while the results count, the moves on the chess board that go to make the game usually remain secret. True, now and again some of these moves leak out, but never before one committed a blunder. The following episode is a case in point:

One day the American minister in St. Petersburg called an official of the embassy into his private office and said to him:

"I have just come from an audience with the czar. He has told me that he has sent word to the emperor of France that he will not permit the dismemberment of the American republic by European intervention, and that he fears that Napoleon will induce England to join him in interesting before the latter learns of the czar's position. England once committed a not well withdrawal, and England and France together will be too strong for Russia, especially as the matter would be fought out on the water. It is of vital importance that the British government be at once advised of the czar's position, and I wish you to carry an official communication to that effect. I warn you that that fox, Napoleon, has the best spy system in the world, and he sits right here in St. Petersburg. It does in Paris. The French ambassador will endeavor to keep the English government in ignorance of the czar's stand and as long as possible that her master may make an English alliance for the purpose of intervention before the czar's intention is known in England."

"We are watched by French spies. Our mail in going through the Russian post is watched by Russian officials in the pay of the czar. The French ambassador there is no avenue that is not spied upon. Your going to get the message will enable you to get to London with your message. If possible do not sleep on the way unless you are guarded. Remember the union of the states depends upon your success."

That same evening the official, whom we shall call Roger Coleman, entered a railway station in St. Petersburg, was making his way to a westbound train when a railway official, with a "This way, sir," led him to a coach, opened a door and said: "This is the best and most vacant seat, and as soon as Coleman had filled it the official shut the door and locked it."

At the first stop most of those who were in the compartment with Coleman got out, and at the second station the seats were all left vacant except one occupied by a young girl. Several persons, seeing that there were only two persons in the compartment, started to enter it, but they were told by an official standing by the door to go to another coach. Some time before the train moved on he shut the door and locked it.

The light in the coach being poor, Coleman folded his arms, closed his eyes and leaned his head back on the cushion. He had no intention of going to sleep. He was wondering how the journey before him and wondering how he would be interfered with if at all. For some time he was perfectly motionless. Then between his eyelids he saw the girl, who sat on the other side of the coach and opposite him, begin to look at him suspiciously. He began to breathe like a sleeper and finally to snore. Then he reached for his traveling bag, which he had placed on the seat beside him. Coleman was lying flat on his back, his head resting on the cushion, and his face lit up with pleasure at seeing a passenger lying on the very top of some toilet articles. Withdrawing the bag, he thrust it in her bosom, shut the bag and leaning back in her seat, pretended to sleep.

Instead of endeavoring to prevent the theft, Coleman snored on. And this is what he said to himself: "That being one of several passports I have with me, I shall not be disturbed by the loss." He was guided to this compartment by a railroad official or a man disguised as a railroad official in the pay of the French ambassador; the compartment having been previously packed by the same person with those who held tickets for the first and second stations, and the route. This girl was to be left alone with me to steal my passport."

At the next station the girl left the coach, and Coleman, being alone in the compartment and learning from the guard that the train did not stop again for an hour, got a little sleep. After the next stop there was none till the train reached Vilna, and since no one got in with Coleman he slept till reaching that city. The first important stop he noticed was moving toward the border was Konigsberg in Germany, and from there, after skirting the Baltic, he passed through Hamburg and Bremen and resorted to without adventure. Indeed, he did not look for his enemies in Germany, believing that Holland, being much nearer Paris, would be a better ground for the operations. He purposed to cross the North Sea from Rotterdam.

Besides his hand bag, Coleman carried with him a leather portmanteau, but his official letter from the American minister at St. Petersburg to the prime minister of England he carried on his person. On entering Konigsberg to outwit his enemies he kept his portmanteau on the floor of the car and his heels. A lady entered the compartment who seemed to be leaving her head back on the cushion and closing her eyes. At the first stop after her entrance she said, evidently with effort, to Coleman:

"Would monsieur be so good as to go into the station and bring me a glass of water?"

"Certainly," replied Coleman, and he went for the water. When he returned the sick lady and his suit case were both gone. Those in the coach told him that the lady, fearing he would let her get out, taking the portmanteau with her. He did not think it worth while to look for her, so, handing the glass of water to the waiter he had brought with him from the station, not forgetting a tip, he entered the coach, and the train stopped. He regretted the loss of his clothes, but no one more had noticed his enemies and at the same time had learned their tactics.

Unfortunately this gave him a present false excuse. A passenger, taking out a cigarette case, asked him the present two other passengers besides Coleman for permission to smoke. It was granted, and Coleman also smoked. All were becoming drowsy when they were startled by a crash of a window pane. Coleman, having suddenly become suspicious that the impostor of the man was smoking was drugged, feeling himself coming under its influence, had swung his hand bag against the glass. A current of air at once entered the coach, but no one seemed to understand why Coleman was in such a hurry for air as to smash a window. A few minutes later the train stopped at a station, and the smoker got out.

On approaching Rotterdam Coleman nervously himself for the crowning act of his journey. Undoubtedly some one had planted these traps in his way and had been informed of his failure. He would therefore instruct his hirelings to prevent at all hazards the passage of the traveler across the channel. The main danger was in going from the railway station to the boat. On alighting at the former Coleman, carrying his bag in one hand and a cane in the other, stepped into St. Petersburg in the other, entered the street. It was growing dark, and he feared he might skulk through the narrow streets without being observed.

He was passing through one of the narrowest, dimmest streets of Rotterdam when he saw a man ahead of him emerge from a passageway and look about him. Realizing that he would probably be taken in front and rear at the same time, Coleman glanced back and saw another man coming toward him. Hurrying forward, when he reached the man in front the fellow stood directly in his way and asked him in French the time. Coleman held his bag and his cane in his left hand. Seizing the handle of his cane with his right, he pulled it from the other part, revealing a blade nearly two feet long and held it point down over the head of the man who blocked his way. The fellow ducked and ran like a deer behind him. Coleman took advantage of this chance to dodge into the passageway from which his adversary had emerged and ran for an open street. Seeing an empty cab standing by the curb he stepped in, told the coachman to drive him to the boat and was rolled away.

He was now near the water and had only to pass from land to sea. When he alighted from the cab he saw a man standing with a paper in his hand and a cane in the other. On reaching the shore and of the gangway the man stepped in his way and began to read something to him. Coleman, understanding this to be a ploy to delay him and noticing that the man was standing very near the edge of the dock, pretending to believe it was the danger of being lost, rushed toward the gangway and over his shoulder the process server into the water. A policeman stood ready to follow the reading with an arrow, but the attention of every one was diverted to the man spluttering in the water. Coleman, taking advantage of the diversion, ran about the boat and, going down into the hold instead of up into the cabin, found a convenient cranny in which to hide.

The boat did not leave for two hours, but either the hunters for the message bearer gave up the chase or could not find their man. As soon as the boat had left the dock Coleman went into a stateroom, locked the door and, throwing himself on a berth, went to sleep.

He did not awaken till the boat touched the English coast. Then, rousing himself, he went ashore, took a train and in a few hours was in London.

Here the narrative which was written by Coleman to his wife in 1868 ends. It is always found of this story has been taken ends. There is no mention of the presentation of the information he bore to the English government, and the fact remains that Napoleon III. failed signally to induce England to intervene in American affairs.

ORIGIN OF THE LIFEBOAT.

A Broken Wooden Bowl Gave William Wouldhave the Idea.

Writers are always fond of dilating upon the commonplace origin of remarkable inventions. Still another instance of their accidental nature—and more so, inasmuch as it gives rise to Mr. T. M. Mearns in "The Lifeboat and Its Story."

In the course of a country stroll William Wouldhave, the inventor of the self-righting lifeboat, came across a woman who asked him to lift a heavy vessel of water just drawn from the well. The water in the vessel was so heavy that the broken half of a wooden bowl. Wouldhave was drawn into conversation, and the hands quiet while he talks, he idly toyed with the floating piece of wood. Naturally he turned it over and found to his surprise that it immediately righted itself. He inverted it again with the same result, and since he was at the time actually at work on the problem of an unstable boat he immediately realized the importance of his chance discovery.

It is an experience that any one can readily make for himself. All you require is the fourth part of a hollow "porcelain sphere," or, to put it in more homely language, the quarter of a coconut shell split from end to end. Put the shell in a bowl of water and you will find that it will not remain capsize, but comparison between it and an even keel. In scientific language it will float with only the convex surface downward.

Now think back if you put out a broken rubber ball if you get five or six little round bottomed, high edged little. It remained for William Wouldhave to discover that these are all little self-righting lifeboats.

American Gardens.

Speaking one day at a color conference, in which pictures of the beautiful gardens and statuary at Versailles were shown, Carroll, of Vevy, the noted landscape painter, declared that the methods of French and American landscape architects.

"The French are better gardeners," he said, "have a lighter touch. The trouble with Americans is that when they make gardens they often call in grave-diggers and architects. The fact is that our formal gardens sometimes look like cemeteries."—New York Times.

Statement Time.

When the mail man passed Johnny Jones said to Willie Green:

"Look; I think he is going into your house."

"Yes," said Willie; "we get lots of letters. Sometimes we get as many as three at one time."

"Eth," ejaculated Willie, "you ought to see the letters my papa gets at the first of every month."—Youngsters Telegram.

JUVENILE HEROISM.

The Brave Mexican Cadets at the Defense of Chapultepec.

Many incidents in the Mexican war are still recounted to fire the hearts of Mexicans. One of these occurred during the defense of Chapultepec, a defense that was as gallant as was the attack. In this battle forty-eight Mexican cadets, among others, lost their lives. The story is a stirring one.

When General Scott had taken the place by storm and General Barba had surrendered, a Mexican cadet only fifteen years of age, seeing the flag of his country in peril, most of his comrades being already slain, climbed the flag-staff, tore the banner from its place, wound it around his body and slid down, intending to plunge over the precipice in order to save the colors from falling into the hands of the enemy.

That act of heroism being frustrated, the brave boy, with the banner still wrapped around him, fought until he was killed by a volley of eight of these schoolboys, ranging in age from fourteen to twenty years. He buried in one grave as the foot of the hill. Hear by the way the cadets of Chapultepec are flowers upon this sepulcher—Harper's Weekly.

EARLY WORLD RECORDS.

Fossil Animals and Plants Constitute the Geologist's Key.

The work of the United States geological survey in paleontology—the study of fossil remains of animals and plants that lived ages ago—is a distinct branch of the very practical economic problems of today. The descriptive paleontological reports are often treated as "pure science," yet the study of the fossils of the past may be these delineations of the groups of animal or plant life which lived in the past, some particular epoch there is not one of these papers describing the fauna or flora of a formation that does not prove sooner or later to have practical value and to be essential to geology in its constantly increasing refinement of study and results.

Without paleontology the geological classification of formations, their correlation and the determination of their mutual relations would be impossible. In fact, real and symmetrical progress in geology is impossible without corresponding interrelated development and refinement of its handmaid, paleontology. The study of the economic geology of any region of complicated structure is blind and inconsequent unless the time relations of the strata concerned are known. These relations are indicated by the fossils which the strata contain.—Annual Report Director of United States Geological Survey.

Cornish Place Names.

Cornish place names are remarkable for the number of old names they commemorate, such as St. Tudy, St. Coby, St. Ury, St. Enoode, St. Brise and St. Plafur.

A story is told of a Cornish cadet, a date for ordination who, when asked by the examining chaplain where he was born, replied, "At St. Bral," giving the date of ordination. "St. Bral," "Good heavens!" exclaimed the chaplain, "I know they have some strange saints in Cornwall, but should never have imagined they would canonize him!"

There are three other Cornish villages whose names it would be hard to match for singularity—Bumblie, London Apprentice and Drunkards All.—London Globe.

Wasted Time.

"Well, what did you do when the problem came up?"

"Wasted time. Went out and asked the advice of several friends."

"What did you get?"

"Seventeen different solutions."

"And then?"

"Then I took the advice of an eighteenth friend and won out."

"And who was your eighteenth friend?"

"Myself."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Canadian Boundary.

The boundary between British and American territory is usually marked by anything in the nature of a wall or a fence. In traveling from Montreal to New York the train suddenly slows down and stops in the middle of a green field. It is then boarded by United States revenue officers, who want to know whether you have anything to declare. That is how you know that you have reached the international boundary line.—London Chronicle.

Broken.

"Bijinks has broken his engagement with Miss Hunsam, he says."

"What was the break up?"

"She said she wouldn't marry him, and he said he wouldn't be engaged to any girl who wouldn't marry him."

A LEAP FOR LIFE.

It Saved Him From the Bear, but Trapped Him In Mid-air.

STILL HIS LUCK HELD GOOD.

Swinging From a Broken Cable, With Death Almost Certain on the Floor of the Rocky Canyon Far Below, He Took a Desperate Chance and Won.

Some persons have more than their fair share of adventure. Of this fortunate or unfortunate class is Mr. W. G. Gilbert, the hero of an extraordinary experience told by Mr. B. D. Strong in the Wide World Magazine. Mr. Gilbert had been exploring an unfrequented cave high up in the side of a deep canyon in Yellowstone park when he suddenly came upon a huge silver tip bear that showed unmistakable signs of displeasure at being disturbed. The man dashed out of the den, with the snarling bear close at his heels.

The face of the canyon was almost a sheer precipice. To try to run down it was certain death, for if he did not make it in time he would be hurled to the bottom before he had gone a hundred feet the bear would almost instantly overtake him. Despairingly he looked about him.

A short distance away was the platform of an old aerial tramway that had been used to carry ore across the canyon to the other side. One of the big iron buckets in which the ore had been carried still swung on its two little wheels from the overhead cable, or, to be more exact, from the platform—just out of reach. It offered the only available means of escape, however, and the hunted man, after a moment's hesitation, sprang for it. With a shrill cry, for the bear was almost upon him, Gilbert sprang forward and, with every muscle set, leaped out from the cavern toward the bucket, the edge of which he just managed to grasp with his fingers.

He struggled hard to raise himself up into it, but for a long time the swinging bucket thwarted every effort. Finally he got a leg over the edge, laboriously clambered in and sank exhausted to the bottom.

Balked of his prey, the angry bear began to claw and tear at the slender cable. In some way the animal touched the big wheel over the cable. The wheel began to turn, and, as it turned, the bucket, with its human freight, ran rapidly down the cable, swinging and swinging as it about to turn over.

Suddenly there was a tearing, snapping noise, and the great wheel of the cable, weather beaten cable parted. The bucket sagged downward sickeningly.

Looking back, Gilbert saw that only half a dozen strands now sustained the weight of the bucket. If they should part he would be dashed down upon the rocky bottom of the canyon, fully 200 feet below.

It was a serious predicament. The cable might part under his weight at any time, or the bucket might strike the twisted wire a hard blow, which would almost certainly break them. He could not pull himself up, for the bucket was too heavy. He could not wait, for the bear was overhead and he disappeared years before. Although there was little hope that any one would reach him, he waited a moment, calmly, he shouted aloud for help.

Fortunately for Gilbert a party of men passing near by heard his call and hurried to his rescue. But they saw his plight they were at a loss how to save him. At last one of them jumped on his horse, dashed back to the outfit wagon and returned with several long fish lines and all the rope he could find.

In a few minutes he had whittled out a rough bow and arrow. After tying the fish line to the arrow he shot the latter up and over the bucket. Then Gilbert pulled up the rope which had been fastened to the line and tied it to the cable.

It was a desperate chance for life, but it was his only one. Carefully, without a single unnecessary motion, he stood up in the bucket, grasped the rope, clambered over the side and began to hoist himself up. Slowly, foot by foot, he came down. The hearts of the men below almost ceased to beat as he hovered a quarter of the distance, then a half, then three-quarters, then all. As he reached the ground they gave a hearty cheer that woke the echoes far and wide, but Gilbert did not hear it. He had fallen in a swoon the moment his feet touched the earth.

Curious Loan Clauses.

Loan clubs have sometimes very peculiar rules. One that flourished recently in North London had a rule compelling each member to borrow $5 every year or in default pay a fine of $5 shillings. Loans required the security of two and had the character of a member being refused a loan for want of security and fined for not borrowing the money.—London Tablet.

CHAPTER I.

A startling Commission
Is Sir Richard Hanley at home?
No, sir, but excuse me, are you Mr. Margatroyd?

I am.
Then, sir, would you be pleased to wait? Sir Richard will be home in a few minutes.
And the footman showed the way across the wide hall, to the small anteroom set apart for the master.

Margatroyd was a barrister by profession, a journalist by choice; a man of the world by the attributes of multiple experience—and still young; and Sir Richard Hanley's study interested him because he was full of fancy, which could not be widely divergent from facts.

Within these four walls history had been shaped during these last few throbbing weeks. From it had gone forth decisions which had affected the markets in Capel Court and Wall street; cabalisms in which the section of a word meant war or peace. Margatroyd had never met Sir Richard Hanley. He had seen him scores of times in crises at political receptions, in the great studios on Show Sunday, at meetings where he had been cheered to the echo, and where he had been howled down and almost hurled—in the House of Commons shouting a policy from the corner seat of the front bench on the Government side, or with masterly analysis picking one to pieces, when in the cold shade of Opposition.

Margatroyd, who had never shaken him by the hand, was not aware that the great man—greater than ever today—even knew his name. Yet in his pocket lay a letter of three lines—Sir Richard Hanley will be much obliged if Mr. Murray Margatroyd will kindly call upon him between the hours of 6 and 7 p.m. tomorrow—Jan. 18th.

21 Curzon Street, Mayfair.
No reason was given. Sir Richard was a man who habitually anticipated obedience, and generally got it. Like a street block before a skilful driver, engagements had a trick of vanishing away, before his nod.

He had nodded—the nod of the nineteenth-century John Bull; Margatroyd, and Margatroyd had come.

The door opened, and the visitor rose, expecting to meet his host and learn the reason of his summons, when the young girl hastily entered.

I beg your pardon, I thought my father was here; I want him particularly.

But Margatroyd was no long little attention to what she said. He was not inattentive to beauty, which ran in ordinary lines; but this face impressed because of its rarity. However, he managed to remain calm.

I am waiting for Sir Richard—by appointment. I was told he would be home shortly. Then seeing her appointment and underlying distress—Can he be of any service? Has anything happened to distress you?

Miss Hanley choked down a sob.

Yes, I'm dreadfully put out; but I don't know whether you can help me or even father, she added. "I've been robbed in St. James' Park. Oh, not violent! A man brushed past me as I was running after my dog Charley—a dachshund; he apologized for a moment before he passed on; and I thought he was a K—American. When I caught Charley—I always take him for a walk every day, unless I'm riding or driving with father—I waited to see what time it was; and my watch was gone."

There Miss Hanley began to cry in earnest.

It was given me by my mother just before she died, she sobbed. Margatroyd would like to have taken her in his arms and comforted her; but the situation would hardly have justified the proceeding. Besides, it might not have proved the desired effect, rather the reverse.

I am so sorry! Are you sure it was stolen? The watch might have dropped in the grass, when you picked up the dog.

For answer, Miss Hanley held up the chain. While Margatroyd was examining it, perhaps with unnecessary care, for it was evident, at a glance, that the link had been snapped with a sharp instrument of some kind, Sir Richard came into the room.

Neither of them heard him open the door. He naturally seemed surprised to see his daughter and the stranger in such close juxtaposition. Miss Hanley threw her arms round Sir Richard's neck, and then rapidly related the circumstances.

So it came about that the journalist was the third person in the interesting personal interview between Sir Richard Hanley and his daughter, which was exactly the purpose for which he had been summoned.

We must, of course, communicate with the police at once, but I am afraid, my dear, the chances of recovery are small. Was there anything by which you could identify the man who brushed against you?

Yes, father, even in that second I could help nothing but my eyes.

A quick glance passed over Margatroyd's face. As a journalist he was brought into contact with all sorts and conditions of men. He thought he could put a name to this one. He hesitated a moment.

Will you leave it to me, Sir Richard? I know the Scotland Yard people pretend to be all right, but I don't think I should like to rely on them.

Miss Hanley's face brightened up. The argument chased away the tears.

Oh, thank you; I shall be grateful if you succeed.

You can't expect gratitude if you fail, Mr. Margatroyd. It rewards successful effort—sometimes; never failure.

The statesman had spoken in his clear-cut tones, with marked emphasis.

Oh, I didn't mean that. I shall appreciate your kindness and trouble just the same.

Now, my dear, you must leave us. Mr. Margatroyd has come for a few minutes' conversation with me.

Miss Hanley took her leave with a little pout, shaking hands with Margatroyd.

Don't keep him too long; I want him. Besides, I want you to find my watch for me.

I will do my best. And there was something about him which implied that when Margatroyd tried hard, he did not unfrequently succeed.

Sir Richard was standing watching him through his pince-nez, while he was looking at Miss Hanley. It was a glance that read men with remarkable accuracy. Hanley was not to be deceived. His look cut to the quick like a spear. On this occasion he did not look dissatisfied.

You wonder naturally why I sent for you?

I could hardly thank you knew of my existence, Sir Richard.

The statesman smiled.

You have been known to me for some time through your work.

A year ago—Sir Richard was by his time sitting at his table; he refreshed his memory from a memorandum pinned to a standing desk—it was on January 7 last year, an article appeared on the front page of the Pioneer on the Trouniti difficulty. I was struck by it. The writer could not have known what I did; but intuition had helped him. He had divined the course diplomacy was taking. In this respect the article was singular.

Journalism, as a rule, takes its inspiration, is content with a limited vision. I thought little of it at the time; but as foreign complications ensued, I noticed again and again the same hand—recognizing it more by the business of its outlook, than by any peculiar turns of phraseology. I wished to know whose pen had raised the Pioneer into prominence—and my notice. My secretary found out your chief.

The name given me was Mr. Murray Margatroyd.

Mr. Margatroyd passed to note the effect of his words. There was an unmistakable glow of pleasure beneath the journalist's clear skin, suggesting are under double strain—strength to live and learn and strength to grow—they must have nourishment—not overloaded stomachs, but concentrated nutriment to aid mature during the growing period.

GROWING BOYS' GIRLS

The wonderful record of Scott's Emulsion of cod liver oil has been proved for three generations. It strengthens the bones, muscles and sinews; builds the body, creates energy and prevents and relieves colds and fortifies the lungs.

Millions of delicate and undeveloped children have been made strong, sturdy and hearty with Scott's Emulsion.

his olive complexion with a warmer hue than his own.

You are very kind.

I am just that. I shall, I have little time to be kind. Sir Richard went on.

But I did not send for you to tell you this, or to waste your time. I sent for you because I was in need of some one of bright and intelligent, a gentleman, and at the same time connected with the Government. Sir Richard passed and he passed on. Whether you accept my suggestions or not, you will regard them as absolutely confidential.

Certainly, Sir Richard.

I may say that I have obtained the permission of your chief to make use of your services for a time, if you are agreeable.

There is nothing I should like better.

Wait a little, Mr. Gillray, the editor of the Pioneer does not know the details of the work I have in view for you; but he is willing to be responsible for it, if necessary.

You are aware of all the particulars of the Transatlantic controversy which have reached the public eye.

Evening on the Farm
(Thirty Years Ago)
John, have you wound the clock?
And put out the cat?
Yes, dear.
And locked the door?
Yes, dear.
Then you can come to bed.
(Today)

Rudolph, have you locked the safe?
Yes.
And put the auto in the garage?
Yes.
And shut off the dynamo in the basement?
Yes.
All right, you can roll into the hay now.

Needs Assistance
Black has a terrible temper.
So I have heard.
It seems as though he can't control it.
I have noticed that it always takes a bigger man than he is to control it for him.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.
Found His Place
You know that old lightward Jenks? Sure.
He goes to the theatre now regularly once a week.
Yes, a moving picture show.

Evidence
Seen Mrs. Gayboy lately?
No, why?
She is now in Paris gown and a new diamond bracelet.
Now when indiscretion has Gayboy been committing.

Hard on Her
Poor Mabel! I think her father is so mean to her!
What's the trouble?
You know how nicely she and Charlie are getting on?
Yes.
Well, now her father tells her that he can't afford to pay for a new gown as long as she runs the parlor lights five nights in the week.

Nearly all children are subject to worms, and many are born with them. Spare them suffering by using Mother's Own Tablets. Worms, Intestinals, the best remedy of the kind that can be had.

He Had Discovered
Why do they call this the century rug? asked the fluffy young thing leaning far out to see what was going on.
Because, replied the man who was tooling with the bolts and valves of the bucking auto, it takes a century to make it.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.
How He Would Get Them
While, if your brother gave you two apples and your sister gave you two more, how many would you have?
I would have four.
Correct, Willie.
But I would have two fights first.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS
ALWAYS DO GOOD
Mother, whether your baby is suffering from indigestion, colic, worms, or from some other form of childhood ailment, you will find Baby's Own Tablets a sure relief. Thousands of mothers use nothing else for their little ones. The Tablets always do good. They cause no possible harm and are equally good for the newborn babe or growing child. They are sold by medicinal dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Say, you are a shoe manufacturer? This name is for new footwear. I would call it the president's shoe, and everybody would be anxious to step into it.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY
Take LAXATIVE BISMUTH TABLETS. Druggists refund money if it fails to cure. Dr. J. C. HENNER'S signature is on each box. 10c.

Willing to Please
I have a fortune in a name that I will sell for about $100,000, and it is cheap at that.
Better keep it rather than sacrifice it.

THE Foe of Indigestion.—Indigestion is a common ailment and few are free from it. It is a most distressing complaint and often the suffering attendant it is most severe. The very best remedy is Parmentier's Vegetable Pills, taken according to directions. They rectify the irregular action of the stomach and restore healthy action for many years they have been a standard remedy for dyspepsia and indigestion and are highly esteemed for their qualities.

St. Paul Park Incident
"After drinking coffee for breakfast I always felt languid and dull, having no ambition to get to my morning duties. Then in about an hour or so a weak, nervous derangement of the heart and stomach would come over me with such force I would frequently have to lie down."

Tea is just as harmful, because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.

"At other times I had severe headaches; stomach finally became affected and digestion so impaired that I had serious chronic dyspepsia and constipation. A lady, for many years State President of the W. U., told me she had been greatly benefited by quitting coffee and using Postum. She said that Postum was a God-send, her heart trouble having been relieved after leaving off coffee and using Postum."

"No such case as I came to my notice that I concluded coffee was the cause of my trouble and I quit and took Postum. I am more than pleased to say that my days of trouble have disappeared. I am well and happy."

Several cases of scarlet fever have been reported in this district. It is sincerely hoped that it may be kept from spreading.

The Baseball Dance on Friday last was a successful social speaking. It is doubtful whether it was as good financially. Don't forget the first game of the season for the Rosebud league, when Airdrie plays Carstairs at home is on the 22nd.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Thomas visited Calgary during the week.

Mr. L. Farr is busy building new telephone lines round here. The inclemency of the weather is keeping back the work some but not to any great extent.

Reports show that 60 per cent. of the seedling is finished here. It would all have been finished but for the recent bad weather.

P. Burns and Co. shipped a car load of cattle from here on Monday. The grading of the two main streets from the Edmonton trail into town. This is something that is badly needed as soon as the weather will allow.

Ed. Armstrong is building a fine new house for this season.

A. Bissett who is working with his team south of Calgary was in town for the week end.

Messrs. Reach and Porter, of Calgary, were in town on Friday and took in the Baseball dance.

There will be a baseball practice on Tuesday, and as the diamond has been skinned and is in excellent condition all the boys are requested to turn out and get to work.

Fish are very plentiful in the creek now and as a result the inevitable fish stories are already going the round.

Messrs. A. E. Bower and G. F. Norris made an auto trip to Calgary on Friday.

J. R. G. Weldon has returned from Athabasca landing to look after the farm he has here, while his brother stays at Athabasca landing.

Robt. Young, Jr., has returned from college at Edmonton and is now staying at home for a time.

Messrs. V. Glyk and Farrell, of Calgary, are in town visiting B. Dorval.

R. Whitfield made a short business trip here on Monday, on his way to Calgary.

J. R. Weldon has left for Athabasca landing to take up his duties on his farm there.

N. Prickett made a business trip to Taber during the week.

The Modern View

He married his affinity.
He did?
Yes.
Here! I never heard of such a thing!
Why shouldn't he?
But they aren't affinities after they are married.

Worms are encouraged by morbid conditions of the stomach and bowels, and no-sabot. Miller's Worm Powders will alter these conditions almost immediately and will sweep the worms away. No destructive parasite can live in contact with this medicine, which is not only a worm destroyer, but a health-giving medicine most beneficial to the young constitution and as such it has no superior.

No Such Thing

She said I was rather young.
She did?
Yes, and that friend of hers said: Oh, well; she'll get over it.
Mean thing.

Minard's Unimint Relieves Neuralgia

More Fitting

He fell in love with the teacher, is he so young as that?
You mean to say, is she so young? Probably I meant to ask are both so young?

PILLS CURED IN 14 DAYS

Your druggist will refund money if FAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of itching, blind, bleeding or protruding piles in 14 days.

DOCTORS ADVISE OPERATIONS

Saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Swarthmore, Penn.—"For fifteen years I suffered untold agony, and for one period of nearly two years I had hemorrhages and the doctors told me I would have to undergo an operation, but I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am in good health now. I am all over the change of life and cannot praise your Vegetable Compound too highly. Every woman should take it at that time. I recommend it to both old and young for female troubles."—Mrs. EMILY SWARTHMORE, Swarthmore, Pa. Canadian Women's Experience.

Fort Union, Ont.—"I feel as if I could get told others enough about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was weak and tired and I could not sleep at night. A friend recommended your Compound and I soon gained health and strength and could not wish to sleep better. I know other women who have taken it for the same purpose and they join me in praising it."—Mrs. Wm. A. HERRICK, 601 South Victoria Street, Fort Williams, Ontario.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, it is not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Four letters will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Bell is learning dressmaking. Is she?
Yes.
In order to make her own clothes, I suppose.
Not at all. In order to earn money enough to hire a modiste to make them for her.

Nothing for It

How good is he?
For any reasonable amount at the bank.

Hard on Brown

Brown has sold that auto of his. Yes, and also sold the man who bought it. I should say.
Do you suppose he can collect on both sales?
Not if the buyer discovers the second sale before he settles for the first.

POPULAR YOUNG FARMER TALKS

TELLS WHAT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS DID FOR HIM

He's Back at Work Again, After Suffering from the Pains, Nervousness and Depression that Only Kidney Disease Can Bring.

Point Alexander, Ont., (Special).—Mr. D. J. Frounce, a well-known and popular young farmer, living near here, who has been a sufferer from kidney disease for some time past, is back at work again, and he says, without hesitation, that his cure is due to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I was always tired and nervous," Mr. Frounce says, in speaking of his illness. "I suffered from backache and neuralgia, and my sleep was broken and unrefreshing. My eyes were puffed and there were dark red circles around them."

"My muscles would cramp. I felt heavy and sleepy afterwards, and I was depressed and low-spirited, while shortness of breath and dizzy spells served to make life yet more miserable for me."

"I was always thirsty; my limbs were heavy; and I had a dragging sensation across the loins."

Particular

How do you like the little girl who has just moved in next door, Mabel?
My mamma doesn't let me play with her.
Don't you like her?
Uh-huh!
Then why doesn't your mother let you play with her?
Cause she never wants me to play with people's little girls who call their maids 'bird girls'.

Grating

Life is just one grand sweet song. Huh!
Well!
That may be, but too blamed many of us can't find the tune for the variations, and the rest are mostly off the key.

Sure Enough

There's no curse like ill health. Oh, I don't know. It has its uses. Name one.
It has got several notable persons out of the penitentiary.

TO EASE TIGHT CHEST AND CURE A COLD RUB ON NERVILINE

No Remedy Half so Efficient

"I didn't have to suffer long with a sore, wheezy chest. I had a mighty bad cold—it held me like a vise, but I knew what to do. I took half a teaspoonful of Nerviline in hot water and rubbed my neck and chest every half hour during the evening. You would hardly credit the way Nerviline loosened up that tight chest, enabled me to breathe like a free man, gave me comfort in a few hours."

This is the experience of J. P. Durand, a well known resident of Burlington, Vermont. In thousands of homes Nerviline is used every day. If a little child has a sick stomach, a few drops will suffice. If there is any bowel disorder or diarrhoea, only a small dose is required inwardly or outwardly, wherever there is pain or inflammation, Nerviline will always relieve quickest and cure surest of any remedy known. Family size, 50c; small bottle 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Carthazone Co., Buffalo, N.Y.

Wonderful what a difference good fortune makes to a man. It often enables people who haven't known him for years to recognize him on the street.

Poor Substitutes

He had no auto to get to.
Nor aunt that had a cent.
And so the careless sluggard
Off to his 'uncle' went.

What is more pathetic than a middle-aged person trying to make himself and others believe he is young?

The man who is anxious to oblige never gets rusty for lack of opportunity to practice his obsequy.

Minard's Unimint for sale everywhere.

You can never tell what a man is until you have seen him tested by prosperity as well as adversity, and then you can only hazard a guess.

It is easy enough to be good when the devil has nothing really interesting in sight.

No Rest With Asthma. Asthma usually attacks at night, the one time when rest is needed most. Hence the loss of strength, the nervous debility, the loss of flesh and other evils which must be expected unless relief is secured. Fortunately relief is possible. Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy has proved its merit through years of service. A trial will surely convince you.

The trouble is the politicians don't just understand what would happen to the graft industry if women were permitted to abuse themselves with the little white ball.

Occasionally we meet a man whose idea of getting even with a fellow has doesn't like consists, in kicking his pet dog on the side.

No Loss

How do you feel about woman suffrage?
Well, I am willing that a woman should vote if she wants to, but she can't vote and have my seat in the street car too.

Well, as she seldom gets my seat I suppose that she won't lose anything by voting.

Aesthetic Girl

Maudie has broken her engagement with Harry.
For what reason?
She says, with her dark blue disposition and her pink hair she is afraid that they would not be able to harmonize the house furnishings.

Smart Landlady

She always tries to have her boarders meet a lot of pretty girls. Why?
She says a young man never calls much when he is in love.

Breaking it to Him Gently

Maudie, will you marry me?
Well, Charlie, I'll think about it. What will you think about it?
Some very uncompromising things I am afraid.

Because a millionaire subscribes heartily to a fresh air fund, don't assume that it is safe to leave a railroad or a little unprotected trust lying round in his vicinity overnight.

NOTHING BUT THE BEST

QUALITY is the secret of the McLaughlin reputation for carriage building. Quality is the reason for Canada's Largest and Best Equipped Carriage Factory—a factory which can turn out a carefully constructed, and thoroughly inspected, vehicle every ten minutes of each working day in the year.

It would be easy to make a gigantic fortune in a few years by substituting lower grade materials, but such a policy would be nothing more nor less than business suicide, and we prefer to continue along the lines laid down by this company more than 44 years ago.

A Constant Change In Body's Tissues

"Our bodies," says Huxley, "may be likened to a vessel in the river which retains its shape for a while, though every instant each particle of water is changing."

The tissues of the body, composed of millions of tiny cells, are being constantly broken down and wasted away by the process of life, and especially by overwork, worry and disease.

In order to reconstruct these wasted tissues there are necessary such elements as iron, sulphur, magnesium, potassium, etc., and when these are not supplied in sufficient quantities in the food we eat it is necessary to aid nature by the use of some restorative preparation.

Most people find Dr. Chase's Nerve Food particularly effective under such circumstances, because it is composed of the very elements of nature which go to form new, rich blood, create new nerve cells and rebuild wasted tissues.

This great food cure is radically different from medicines which are usually employed in the treatment of nervous diseases. For, while they stimulate tired nerves to overexertion or by narcotic influence soothe and deaden them, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food revitalizes wasted nerve cells and so accomplishes lastingly beneficial results.

Such symptoms as sleeplessness, irritability, headache, indigestion, brain tire and feelings of fatigue and discouragement soon disappear when the system is built up by the use of

Deering Harrowing Machines

Is your present equipment of harvesting machines satisfactory? How about your binder? How old is it? Does it lack the improvements which have been put on later model machines? If it does, you need a new one which will harvest your crop easily and quickly.

And where is your mower? Is it in good shape, or does it also lack the improvements which are contained in new machines?

Do you own a satisfactory hay rake? How about the hay tedder? Perhaps you already own some of these machines, but if you don't, isn't it good business policy for you to investigate Deering harvesting machines which are recommended by thousands of farmers?

If you will investigate the Deering machines it will help you to get better and bigger results. You will not go on using old, worn-out machines which do not have present day improvements.

An investigation does not place you under any obligation to buy. Come in and see us. Get a Deering catalogue which explains details.

FOREST PROTECTION.

The next convention of the Canadian Forestry Association, which is endeavoring to arouse public opinion to the value of forests on lands unsuited to agriculture, will be held at Winnipeg, Man., July 7 to 9. Arrangements for the gathering are well under way. Already the Secretary has received intimation of the attendance of the most prominent forestry experts on both sides of the International line. The problems which are to be discussed will be largely those of the prairie farmers, among whom there has been for some years now, great activity in planting of shelter belts and woodlots. Other questions, especially those pertaining to the protection of timber lands from fire, will also be dealt with. It is expected that there will be a large attendance from the prairies and from the provinces east and west. In fact from Nova Scotia to British Columbia representative men are looking forward to being present.

Delegates attending the convention will be able to secure convention rates over the railway and steamship lines, particulars of which can be secured from, James Lawler, Secretary, Canadian Forestry Association, Canadian Building, Ottawa.

Westerners await with almost as much interest the printing of the hangers announcing the Calgary Industrial Exhibition, as they do the date of the popular annual western holiday. Those who have anticipated something striking and appropriate in hangers will not be disappointed when they see the presentation of the link between the past and the present which characterizes this year's announcement.
